

LEDGES STATE PARK

1515 P Ave, Madrid, IA 50156

With its distinctive geological features, breathtaking views and vibrant history, Ledges State Park is a nature lover's paradise. One of the very first state parks in Iowa, Ledges has been a must-see Iowa attraction for decades. In addition to natural beauty, several structures built by the Civilian Conservation Corps are a must see – from an arch stone bridge to a shelter in Oak Woods, stone trail steps and a shelter in Lower Ledges.

PARK AMENITIES/POINTS OF INTEREST/THINGS TO DO

The main attraction at Ledges is the canyon drive. This winding one-way road along Pea's Creek offers motorists breathtaking views of the canyon and Des Moines River valley. Sandstone ledges rise nearly 100 feet above the floor of the stream bed. The sandstone was deposited 300 million years ago following the retreat of the shallow sea that covered much of the Midwest. About 13,000 years ago, glacial melt-water began to cut down through the sandstone, forming the park's dramatic cliffs and valleys. Along the canyon drive, park visitors can stop for a picnic, wade the stream and enjoy the colors fall foliage offers. The canyon drive periodically closes to vehicle traffic during the summer due to heavy rainfall and flooding. It also closes to vehicle traffic during the winter. Even in the winter, though, visitors are allowed to hike in to the canyon to explore its winter beauty.

Four and a half miles of hiking trails lead up and down steep slopes to scenic overlooks, and provide access to spectacular views of the Pea's Creek canyon. Popular overlook locations include Inspiration Point, Crow's Nest and Table Rock. While most of the trails include steep portions, a universally accessible trail surfaced in crushed rock, leads visitors to the serene Lost Lake area in the southern area of the park.

Ledges offers a plethora of campsites, including electrical hook-ups and non-electric sites. There are also hike-in sites and one designated youth group campsite. Modern rest rooms, showers, dump station and a playground are located in the campground also.

SPECIAL PARK RULES

Per Iowa Code 461A.35; Rock climbing, rappelling and carving are not allowed on the sandstone in Ledges State Park. Pick up the rules/regulations booklet for more information on general park rules.
